LEARN HOW TO CONTROL YOUR STATE OF MIND INVESTING
ONLY 10 MINUTES A DAY

Stressed?

Overwhelmed?

how often do you raise your voice?

FRUSTRATED?

HOW OFTEN DO YOU BLAME OTHERS?

You may get easily stressed by your own thoughts on to-do list, that never gets shorter, work issue, that must be resolved asap, health, that is indicating passing years, children that are testing your patience, criticism, that makes you a scape-goat; an award, that you deserved, but never got one; traffic, that is not moving when you are getting late for your morning meeting, etc.

Tony Robbins, world-famous life coach, says: I really believe that if you don't have 10 minutes for yourself, you don't have a life. Most of us think we control our own thoughts. Many of our thoughts are primed; they're triggered by our environment."

When negative emotions get cumulated, pumped by intense thinking, stress level rises. You can easily recognize it by your physiology, as the body starts producing survival hormones, adrenaline and cortisol, so you may experience a rapid heartbeat and shallow breaths.

While an instant reaction to the situation of danger has been helping us to survive for millenniums, a longlasting exposure to stress can lead to such severe disorders as general physical and emotional fatigue, frequent headaches, colds, and stomach problems, depression or sleep disturbances...

RECIPE FOR A CALM MIND

Sit down, Put your headphones on, Close your eyes and Listen to the relaxing music. Start with a breathing exercise, and continue focusing on one quote of your choice.

Frequency: Daily Timing: 10 min. Servings: 1

1. BREATHING

Practice deep breathing. Every morning before diving into the daily routines, decide on a two-minutes breathing workout. There are various ways to make breathing your ally, but there is one method which we really recommend.

WHAT TO DO

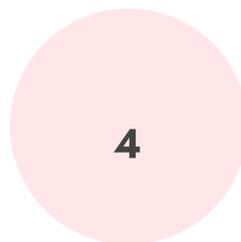

According to 4-7-8 breathing technique, widely diffused by dr. Andrew Weil, a practitioner and teacher of integrative medicine for the last thirty years. these are the steps to follow:

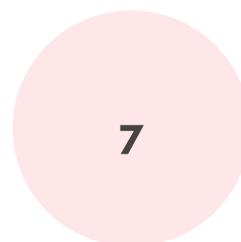

This is one breath. Now inhale again and repeat the cycle three more times for a total of four breaths.

FOCUS

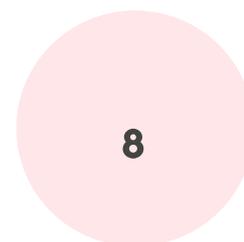

While repeating the 4 cycles of breathing, draw your attention to the oxygen that you are inhaling, placing it in different parts of your body.

Close your mouth and inhale quietly through your nose to a mental count of four.

Hold your breath for a count of seven.

Exhale completely through your mouth, making a whoosh sound to a count of eight.

Dr. Andrew Weil says: “Once you develop this breathing technique by practicing it every day, twice a day, it will be a very useful tool that you will always have with you. Use it whenever anything upsetting happens – before you react. Use it whenever you are aware of internal tension. Use it to help you fall asleep. Use it to deal with food cravings. Great for mild to moderate anxiety, this exercise cannot be recommended too highly. Everyone can benefit from it.”

2. LISTENING

Some people find the relaxing music or the sound of nature very calming, so they turn those slow bids as a background for breathing exercises while relaxing, studying or working in order to distress, relax or concentrate. Others find it as a distracting noise and prefer a quiet environment. Try it out and check if music works for you! There is no "right" or "wrong" way.

Many experiments, research studies, and theoretical work have proven that music, especially relaxing music, has great cognitive, emotional and neurobiological benefits. According to Eckhart Tolle: "Music creates a bridge for people to move out of thinking and into presence."

WHAT TO DO

Simply, find online relaxing piece of music, sometimes called relaxation/ study/ focus music, or the sound of rain, flowing river, waves crashing against a reef, a whale's song and test which of those suits you most (if any). Put your headphones on, close your eyes and listen.

FOCUS

While listening, draw your attention to the beats, rhythm, volume, distinguish various instruments, changing intensity of each sound.

3. FOCUSING

The above-described breathing exercise and listening to relaxing music, already aim at distracting the flow of incessant and involuntary thoughts. However, focusing is so important that we will treat it as a separate step towards reaching the CALM MIND.

Focusing is sticking to one thought. That single thought keeps away other thoughts; distraction of mind is a sign of its weakness; so, practising focusing strengthen it.

Oprah Winfrey says: "What I know for sure, and have had to learn through much trial and error: The voice that truly matters is the silent voice of awareness, consciousness, aliveness. (...) The outside world is constantly trying to convince you-you're not enough. But you don't have to take the bait. Meditation helps you resist."

WHAT TO DO

1. It is important to practice focusing every day. It is better to do it regularly, even if it is for a few minutes than only occasionally.
2. About 10 minutes are quite enough once you begin. In time, as you gain experience and expertise, you may increase the time.
3. Do not practice focusing when you are tired.
4. Select a place where you can be alone and undisturbed. Noises and distractions spoil your concentration, disturb your focus and cause your mind to wander away.
5. Sit in a comfortable position with your back straight. You can sit on the floor, on a cushion, or on a chair, as you find convenient and comfortable.
6. Think for a moment about why you are doing so. (see BENEFITS below)
7. Before you start focusing, decide to postpone any thoughts, ideas and plans until you finish.
8. Strive to stay calm, both mentally and physically, and do not tense your body. If you feel that tenseness increasing within your body, stop for a moment and relax your body.
9. Patience and self-discipline should be always cultivated. These skills would enable you to continue with your practice, despite difficulties and inconvenience. Be patient and gentle with yourself
10. Start with a simple technique focusing on an inspiring quote, choosing it from any spiritual teacher, and repeat it in your mind, trying to find its deep meaning, beyond the written words.
